ATAULF was assassinated at Barcelona.

Begin 415

Galla Placidia gave birth to a son.
He received at baptism the imperial name THEODOSIUS. It reminded Ataulf's people of the man who had been a "friend of peace and of the Goths," and for the Romans it meant legitimacy. The child died within a short time.

ATHAULF entrusted to his brother: He asked him to return Galla Placidia to Honorius and to establish if he could, friendship with the Romans.

Beginning of 415

The Goths were still in NARBONNE.
Vacating the Mediterranean coast of Gaul was probably the last thing ATTHAULF did.
Young Theodosius had already died in Barcelona, where his father was assassinated in late Aug / early Sep of 415

ATHAULF was murdered while he and his retainers were suspecting the horses the deed was committed by one of the men in his entourage; his name was DUBIUS or/and EBERWOLF. The actual cause was revenge for murder of a former lord, the "r h i x of a Gothic subtribe," whom ATHAULF had killed "a long time ago."

Under WALLIA, the Vangols' power was extended over a large part of Southern Gaul and Spain, and assistance was given to the Romans in their conflicts against the Vandals and ALANI.
